- 2002 MSc pharmacy (University of Copenhagen)
- 2008 Phd (University College London)
- 2014 BSc Dietician (University College Zealand)
- 2015 R&D consultant at the Danish College of Pharmacy Practice

I graduated as a MSc in pharmacy in 2002 from University of Copenhagen. I did my PhD at University College London describing pain mechanisms. In 2008 I moved back to Denmark and did two periods as a postdoc at University of Copenhagen characterising glutamate transporters. As I wanted to do research closer to the patient I worked my way back into the pharmacy world first as a clinical pharmacist at Nordsjællands Hospital before ending up in my current position at Pharmakon as a R&D consultant at The Danish College of Pharmacy Practice. I work with patient safety, the transition between primary and secondary care, medication reviews.
